DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-2 and 4-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Radtke [US 3,176,253] in view of Waasner et al. [US 4,594,295]

Radtke discloses a transformer core and lamination therefor [figures 1-2] comprising:

- a substantially T-shaped central core member [17] constituted by a crossbar [23] and a post [24]; and

- first and second substantially L-shaped side members [15, 16], each of the side members constituted by a post [18, 19, 21, 22], wherein edges of the side members are formed with notches/cutouts [62, 63, 64, 65] for receiving a clamp for holding the lamination core together.

Radtke discloses the instant claimed invention except for notches formed on the central member and tooth-like projections formed on the side members.

Waasner et al. discloses a lamination core structure [figure 1] for an electromagnetic device comprising:

- a central core member [4], wherein the central core member including notches [9] on each side thereof; and

- a core element [5], wherein the core element projections [10] cooperating with notches of the central core member.

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skilled in the art at the time the invention was made to use notches/ projections design of Waasner et al. in the core structure of Radtke for the purpose of providing securing.

Regarding claim 2, Radtke discloses the first side member is substantially a mirror image of the second side member.

Regarding claim 6, Radtke inherently discloses a clamping means.

Claim 3 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Radtke in view of Waasner et al. as applied to claim 1 above, and further in view of Dierstein [US 2,907,966].

Radtke in view of Waasner et al. discloses the instant claimed invention except for matching shoulders formed on the central members and side members.

Dierstein discloses a laminated core structure [figure 5] comprising:

- a central core member [3]; and
- two side members [4].

wherein the central core members and two side members including matching shoulders [48, 49, 50].

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skilled in the art at the time the invention was made to use matching shoulders design of Dierstein in Radtke, as modified, for the purpose of facilitating assembly.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

- Onigo [JP 63-076407; Yen [US 6,031,441]; Pikul et al. [US 5,440,286]; Larson et al. [US 5,138,295]; Marriott et al. [US 5,047,745]; Waasner [US 3,587,020]; Brooks [US 2,562,693] and Thordarson [US 1,406,245].
